Сводка

Join Novartis as a Medical Manager and help shape scientific engagement and Medical Affairs initiatives. You will support the design and execution of medical plans aligned with global and local strategies, contribute to clinical research, and build educational dialogue with key opinion leaders and regulatory stakeholders.

About the Role

Major accountabilities:

- Plan and execute medical activities aligned with global and local Medical Affairs strategies.
- Provide accurate, timely scientific responses to medical enquiries and develop standard response documents where appropriate.
- Contribute medical and scientific expertise to clinical trials and research, including study initiation and oversight, and support country strategies for non-interventional studies and investigator-initiated trials.
- Coordinate the review and approval of medical and locally developed promotional materials, adapting global and regional materials to local needs in line with local and P3 guidelines.
- Share medical insights with cross-functional partners, including Pharmacovigilance, Regulatory Affairs, Market Access, Quality Assurance, Commercial and Brand teams.

Requirements

- At least 3 years of Medical Affairs experience in the pharmaceutical industry; 4 or more years of overall industry experience preferred.
- Advanced scientific or medical education, such as MD, PharmD/RPh, RN, PhD, or a degree in Life Sciences.
- Fluency in English and Korean, with strong written and verbal communication skills.
- Strong scientific aptitude and the ability to interpret mechanisms of action, clinical trial designs and clinical data as a trusted scientific expert.
- Strategic thinking and problem-solving skills, drawing on scientific and environmental insights to address complex challenges.
- Effective cross-functional collaboration and external stakeholder engagement.

Why Novartis: Helping people with disease and their families takes more than innovative science. It takes a community of smart, passionate people like you.
