As a BPA Manager for Development Units (DUs), you will play an important role in shaping investment decisions and portfolio value creation across a subsection of the ~2bn$ Development portfolio. This role is designed for a finance professional with a strong investment, valuation, and strategic finance mindset, capable of assessing opportunities, trade-offs, and risks in a highly complex R&D environment.

About the Role

Your responsibilities will be but are not limited to

- Partner with the Head Finance DU to support strategic decision-making across the portfolio, including capital allocation, prioritization of development investments, and assessment of value creation opportunities at both asset and disease area level.
- Lead and contribute to complex investment cases, including scenario modeling and assessments to support key decisions such as progression, acceleration, de-prioritization etc.
- Own a subsection of the Development Unit portfolio and act as a trusted finance partner to support program teams in project and portfolio reviews.
- Lead financial planning cycles for portfolio under responsibility, with a strong focus on value, optionality, and opportunity cost, ensuring financial discipline while actively challenging assumptions and trade-offs across the portfolio.
- Proactively identify risks, opportunities, and inflection points across your portfolio responsibilities, incorporating market dynamics, competitive landscape, development uncertainties, and strategic options into recommendations.
- Deliver targeted analyses and insights on strategic topics (e.g., portfolio scenarios, resourcing trade-offs, external opportunities, or strategic shifts), in close collaboration with portfolio teams and finance stakeholders

Essential Requirements

- Degree in Finance, Economics, Accounting, or related field (MBA preferred)
- Demonstrated years of experience in investment banking, M&A, corporate development, strategic finance, or advanced FP&A, ideally complemented by exposure to global or portfolio-level roles.
- Strong capability in valuation, financial modeling, scenario analysis, and risk assessment. Ability to frame complex, ambiguous situations into clear investment choices and recommendations.
- Ability to think and act like an investor: focusing on returns, opportunity cost, strategic optionality, and disciplined capital allocation to maximize long-term value.
- Ability to engage credibly with senior stakeholders, challenge perspectives constructively, and influence decisions through insight-driven and fact-based recommendations.
- Interest in understanding market dynamics, competitive landscapes, and strategic positioning, and in translating this understanding into differentiated investment insights.
- Strong communication skills with the ability to distill complex analyses into clear, decision-oriented messages
- Proven ability to work effectively across functions, and to navigate diverging viewpoints in a constructive, outcome-oriented manner.
